

Hello, Gobble Up Seattle Vendors!

Some more news to share with you this week...

Permits & Licenses

Just a reminder to please make sure you've obtained your temporary food service permit if you need one. This will most likely pertain to those sampling or selling prepared food, or anything needing cold or hot holding. We still do have room on our blanket permit if you do still need to purchase a permit, and would like to do so under our umbrella at a discounted cost ($100). If you already selected this on your application, no need to email us; we'll be sending out information about this soon! Regardless of whether or not you need a license, all food handlers are expected to abide by these food safety rules, as required by King County.

Posters & Postcards

Do you have a storefront or retail establishment, or participate in weekly farmers' markets? In the past many vendors have requested posters and postcards that they can hand out to their customers, or pass out in other ways around town. If you'd like a stack or a few posters to put up in your window, reply to this email and let us know how many you'd like, and the best mailing address to send them to (and please specify whether you're vending at the Seattle or Portland show--or both!). We really appreciate the help in building the energy around the show as it approaches next month!

Vendor Instagram Posts

Kristen has been busy sending out interview questions to all of our vendors for our Instagram posts to feature you. If you haven't seen yours yet, hang tight as she's still making her way down the list (but it never hurts to check your spam!). You will see fun interviews, videos and more going up daily on our Instagram. If you aren't following us yet @gobbleupnorthwest, be sure to!

Until next time!
